On 22 May 1974, St. Josemaría landed in São Paulo, Brazil, beginning a journey that would take him through Argentina, Chile, Peru, Ecuador, Colombia (where, for health reasons, he was only able to spend a few minutes in the airport), and Venezuela the same year. He returned to Venezuela and Guatemala in 1975.

“I've come here to learn,” the founder repeated more than once in gatherings with the people of the countries he visited. With that phrase, he opened the door to a fruitful exchange that can be seen in life stories and projects 50 years later, showing the impact of the message of Opus Dei in the continent.

The content of each section of the site gives a glimpse of those stories, because the story continues. The content is available in Spanish and Portuguese:

Countries. Message. Impact. Stories.

The journey continues with infographics from each country:

Brazil · Argentina · Chile · Peru ·
Ecuador · Venezuela · Guatemala
